You¢ÃÂÂll have to cut straight through the caulking around the door. Once removed, you¢ÃÂÂll take a pry bar to pull away the trim. Make sure to pull slowly so as to not cause any unwanted damage. There¢ÃÂÂs a good chance there will be staples holding the trim in place, so you¢ÃÂÂll need to remove them. Also, once you¢ÃÂÂve removed the trim, set it to the side because you¢ÃÂÂll need to reinstall it once the new door in installed.Next, remove the old sliding door by lifting it out of the tracks. It¢ÃÂÂll take both hands to remove it, and due to their weight, it¢ÃÂÂs best to remove one at a time. Sometimes, the rollers on the bottom of the door will get stuck. You may need someone to help pry the rollers up as you¢ÃÂÂre lifting the door.If there are any nails left behind after you remove the trim, it¢ÃÂÂs best to remove them. Then, you¢ÃÂÂll take an electric screwdriver and take out any screws that are holding the wooden door frame in place with the sliding door. These screws are usually located on all side of the sliding door. If you don¢ÃÂÂt have an electric screwdriver, you can always use a traditional one.Measure the DoorwayNext, you¢ÃÂÂll take measurements of the doorway. The measurements must be precise so you know what size of sliding glass doors to buy. If there are any boards or shims in place that were holding the old door in place, you¢ÃÂÂll want to remove them to ensure you have exact measurements.Apply FlashingOnce you purchase a new sliding door, you¢ÃÂÂll apply flashing to the door frame before you install it. This protects the door from water damage. When Image Image not available Flash, be sure to apply a layer along the lower threshold of the door frame. Apply it so that â € a little intermittent is being hanging on the outer edge of the door frame. Next, double the flicker so that it is pressed down on the outer side of the door.
